MRS. FETHERSTONE TELLS THE NEED OF CHILD WELFARE

CHICAGO SPEAKER DECLARES THAT CHILD WELFARE IS AS IMPORTANT AS AGRICULTURE AND MANUFACTURE

Mrs. Louis Fetherstone, speaker of the Elizabeth McCormick Memorial Fund, who has come to Wisconsin Rapids and community to speak under the auspices of the City Federation of Women and the Wood County Conference of Social Work, addressed the Rotary Club this noon on the subject of Child Welfare. She told of the necessity of appropriating funds to build up childhood and manhood declaring that agriculture had a place in the president's cabinet while building of manhood had no place and had only a small appropriation to make its bureaus possible.

Tells of Need

"Fifteen million mothers and babies die at the time of child birth," Mrs. Fetherstone stated. "This is due to the fact that mothers are ignorant of the right way to care for themselves during the prenatal period and after the birth of the child, they do not know how to care for the young." She condemned the people who excuse the subject of child welfare saying "God whispers to prospective mothers what to do" as absurd and a cheap way to get out of responsibility. Mrs. Fetherstone denied that it was a delicate subject and that it was many times more important to consider the building of the child than to appropriate huge sums for the stamping out of hog cholera, rusty wheat and other menaces to agricultural pursuits.

Explains Methods

Mrs. Fetherstone explained the methods of combating deaths at child birth and to the small children and babies by establishing infant welfare stations which she declares will be the means of saving thousands of lives She told of one city which had cut down the death rate of young children through the clinics and the weighing of children, prescribing better food and diets for building up the bodies One-third of the children in schools today are undernourished according to Mrs. Fetherstone and she stated that women's clubs which were formerly engaged in discussional work are now finding their responsibilities and are holding examinations, weighing the children to find out those which were undernourished, and assisting in bringing them to normal physical beings.

DR. MORTENSON TALKS TO ELKS ON CANCER

150 local Elks attended the annual "roll call" at the lodge here last night. Dr. O. N. Mortenson, F. A. C. S., gave a short talk on the causes and dangers of cancer, in connection with the state wide campaign now being waged against the disease.

Cancer is not communicable, and is not inherited, Dr. Mortenson stated, but is caused by irritation, or occasionally by a sudden blow. Cancer of the stomach, a very common form, is often caused by taking extremely hot or highly flavored food. Ulcers, dyspepsia and like manifestations are forerunners of a cancerous condition.

If discovered early enough, cancer may be eradicated by a surgical operation, followed by X-Ray treatment. More advanced cases are treated with radium.

WILL TEAR DOWN PART OF BUILDING

SOME OF MACKINNON BLOCK OCCUPANTS FORCED TO MOVE TO MAKE WAY FOR THE BRIDGE

Several occupants of the MacKinnon building were given notices to move on or about the first of January next by the Consolidated Water Power & Paper Co., owners of the building. The eviction was caused by an agreement on the part of the company and the state bridge engineer to remove the east portion of the building which would obstruct high water in case of flood conditions in the spring.

Piers Interfere

The piers of the new bridge and other construction impediments may make it necessary for the east section of the building to be removed. The bridge engineers notified the company about the building a short time ago. If the west end approach is in and other progress made a part of the building will have to be sacrificed for safety and the state is taking no chance of dangers due to high waters. The east section of the building is said to make high water conditions more dangerous to the city and it was recommended that it be taken out.

Inconveniences Few

Those forced to move are Matthews Bros. music and tailoring shop, Drs. T. M. Mills and W. G. Merrill, R. M. Gibson and E. N. Pomainville offices. The other occupants will not be forced to move.

The question of where to move is rather perplexing to those going out as the business district is devoid of suitable locations for business houses and offices at the present time.

When asked of her impressions from the gathering, she said: "I came away wonderfully impressed. It was a convention of rare nature and one which I wish every Wisconsin Rapids citizen would have had the opportunity of attending. We would have only loyal citizens if all people could catch the spirit of the wonderful meeting."

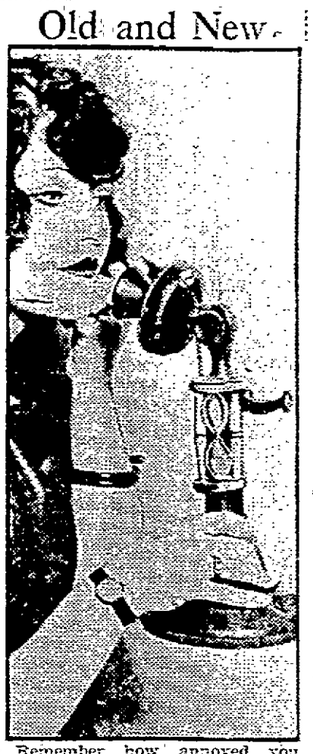
Old and New



Remember how annoyed you were when the operator told you "Time's up," and asked you to drop another nickel? The ancient hour glass adapted to the telephone gives you warning. The sand runs from one globe to the other in just three minutes. If you are long-winded you can turn the glass upside down and start all over again.

HYLAN WINS BY 400,000 MARGIN

WHOLE TAMMANY TICKET SWEEPS NEW YORK UNPRECEDENTED MAJORITIES: BUFFALO VOTES WET MAYOR

New York—John F. Hylan, democrat, has been re-elected mayor of New York City, by a plurality of nearly 400,000 over Henry H. Curran coalition candidate, according to early indications, which may be increased considerably by later returns.

The sweeping victory of Mayor Hylan, who based his campaign almost entirely on his opposition to an increased fare on the local traction lines and his antagonism to the transit commission, created by the state legislature to handle the transit situation has undoubtedly carried with it the election of the entire democratic city ticket, and insures continued democratic or Tammany control of the board of estimate and the board of aldermen.

Carries All Boroughs

Mayor Hylan carried all five boroughs and will receive the largest plurality ever obtained by a candidate for mayor. Controller Charles L. Craig has been re-elected by at least 200,000 over State Senator Charles C. Lockwood, republican-coalitionist and Murray Hulbert, democrat, has been elected president of the board of aldermen by at least that plurality over Vincent Gilroy, anti-Tammany democrat, who was the coalition candidate for that office.

The most surprising result upstate was the election of John H. Walrath democrat, as mayor of Syracuse, by a plurality of 7,000. Mr. Walrath is the first democratic mayor to be elected in fifteen years in that city. Increased street car fares and increased tax rates were the main issues.

Utica and Binghampton elected republican mayors and a democratic mayor was re-elected in Troy.

Wins on Wet Issue

Buffalo, N. Y.—Frank X. Schwab, republican, running on a platform declaring for amendment of the Volstead act to permit the sale of beer and light wines, was elected mayor of Buffalo by a majority of 2,563 over Mayor George S. Buck, also a republican. Mr. Schwab declared during his campaign speeches that a vote for him would be a protest against the prohibition laws as they now stand. Mayor Buck was elected mayor four years ago by a plurality of 15,000.

New York, Nov. 9.—Democratic victories throughout the country were the outstanding features of yesterday's elections. In addition to the numerous democratic victories in eastern municipal elections, Kentucky passed from Republican to Democratic control, and increased democratic majorities are reported from

JURY CONVICTS FAMOUS GUNMAN AND UNION HEAD

HELD TO HAVE PLOTTED $360,000 DEARBORN STATION MAIL ROBBERY; MAXIMUM SENTENCE 66 YEARS

(By Associated Press)

Chicago, Nov. 9—"Big Tim" Murphy, union leader, former state representative, and alleged gunman, was found guilty this morning in Judge Landis court of plotting the $360,000 mail robbery at the Dearborn station last April. Vincenzo Cosmano, president of the street sweepers union, Edward Geirum, alleged driver of the bandit car, and Paul Volanti were also convicted on the charge of conspiracy.

66 Years Maximum

Sentence upon Murphy has not been pronounced as yet. The maximum sentence for the offenses for which he was convicted would be sixty-six years in the penitentiary but it is within the power of Judge Landis to sentence him to a maximum of sixty-six years in the penitentiary, for the offenses of which he was convicted.

Attorneys Bitter

The jury was out all night before the verdict was brought in. In the closing arguments yesterday afternoon, Assistant District Attorney Northrup, who prosecuted for the government, demanded a guilty verdict from the jurors in an argument that bristled with invective.

"These men ask you for an acquittal," he said. "They tell you that Murphy and three others are innocent, but I tell you their guilt has been conclusively proved. We have the testimony of two men who were in the conspiracy that Murphy engineered it and that the others conspired with him.

"In his argument Senator Barbour, appearing for Mr. Murphy, has bitterly attacked the character of the main government witness. He has told you that you should disregard the evidence of Teter and Bradford because they were accomplices. That you cannot do.

All Guilty, He Says

"These men in the second largest city in the United States pulled off a daylight robbery at the point of guns that for daring and disregard of life is enough to turn a man's blood cold. This we have proved, not alone by the testimony of the accomplices but by corroborative evidence so overwhelming, so conclusive, and so inexplicable that no other conclusion can be drawn but that all are guilty."

OIL STATION MANAGER LOSES ARM IN ACCIDENT

North Crandon, Wis. — William Godfrey of Iron Mountain, Mich., manager of the Standard Oil company's branch here, had his right hand so badly crushed Monday while unloading storage tanks at North Crandon that amputation between the elbow and wrist was necessary. The accident happened when he was about to loosen a rope which held a tank suspended in the air.

Mr. Godfrey has been in the employ of the Standard Oil company for twenty-five years.

MRS. GOGGINS SAYS LEGION WAS GIVEN WONDERFUL WELCOME

Mrs. Hugh Goggins, delegate to the National convention of the Women's Auxiliary of the American Legion which was in annual convention last week in Kansas City at the same time the men's organization held their sessions, declared that the city of Kansas City gave the visiting ex-service men and the delegates to the auxiliary and all the guests a splendid welcome and reception.

When asked of her impressions from the gathering, she said: "I came away wonderfully impressed. It was a convention of rare nature and one which I wish every Wisconsin Rapids citizen would have had the opportunity of attending. We would have only loyal citizens if all people could catch the spirit of the wonderful meeting."

Speaking about the reception given the visitors, she said that the people of the city opened their arms and homes to the delegates and visitors, which impressed everyone.

TRIES TO LOSE RUM HANDS IT TO CHIEF

Merrill, Wis. — Chief of Police Thomas Calder was handed a bottle of "hooch" by a card player when he assisted county officials in a search of the Clyde Wernick soft drink parlor at Jeffries. The chief was outdoors as a lookout while the county officials entered the saloon for a raid. The card player seated near an open window reached to his hip pocket and intended to set the bottle on a log pile just outside the window, but in doing so placed it into the officers' hand.

HYLAN WINS BY 400,000 MARGIN

New York—John F. Hylan, democrat, has been re-elected mayor o New York City, by a plurality of nearly 400,000 over Henry H. Curran coalition candidate, according to early indications, which may be increase considerably by later returns.

The sweeping victory of Mayor Hylan, who based his campaign almos entirely on his opposition to an increased fare on the local traction line and his antagonism to the transi commission, created by the state legislature to handle the transit situatio has undoubtedly carried with it th election of the entire democratic cit ticket, and insures continued democratic or Tammany control of th board of estimate and the board o aldermen.

Carries All Boroughs

Mayor Hylan carried all five boroughs and will receive the larges plurality ever obtained by a candidate for mayor. Controller Charles L. Craig has been re-elected by at least 200,00 over State Senator Charles C. Lockwood, republican-coalitionist and Murray Hulbert, democrat, has been elected president of the board of aldermen by at least that plurality over Vincen Gifroy, anti-Tammany democrat, wh was the coalition candidate for tha office.

The most surprising result upstate was the election of John H. Walrath democrat, as mayor of Syracuse, by a plurality of 7,000. Mr. Walrath is the first democratic mayor to be electe in fifteen years in that city. Increase street car fares and increased ta rates were the main issues.

Utica and Binghampton elected republican mayors and a democratic mayor was re-elected in Troy.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Frank X. Schwab, republican, running on a platform declaring for amendment of the Volstead act to permit the sale of beer and light wines, was elected mayor of Buffalo by a majority of 2,563 ove Mayor George S. JURY CONVICTS FAMOUS GUNMAN AND UNION HEAD

(By Associated Press)

Chicago, Nov. 9—"Big Tim" Murphy, union leader, former state representative, and alleged gunman, was found guilty this morning in Judge Landis court of plotting the $360,000 mail robbery at the Dearborn station last April. Vincenzo Cosmano, president of the street sweepers union, Edward Geirum, alleged driver of the bandit car, and Paul Volanti were also convicted on the charge of conspiracy.

66 Years Maximum

Sentence upon Murphy has not been pronounced as yet. The maximum sentence for the offenses for which he was convicted would be sixty-six years in the penitentiary but it is within the power of Judge Landis to sentence him to a maximum of sixty-six years in the penitentiary, for the offenses of which he was convicted.

Attorneys Bitter

The jury was out all night before the verdict was brought in. In the closing arguments yesterday afternoon, Assistant District Attorney Northrup, who prosecuted for the government, demanded a guilty verdict from the jurors in an argument that bristled with invective.

"These men ask you for an acquittal," he said. "They tell you that Murphy and three others are innocent, but I tell you their guilt has been conclusively proved. We have the testimony of two men who were in the conspiracy that Murphy engineered it and that the others conspired with him.

"In his argument Senator Barbour, appearing for Mr. Murphy, has bitterly attacked the character of the main government witness. He has told you that you should disregard the evidence of Peter and Bradford because they were accomplices. That you cannot do.

All Guilty, He Says

"These men in the second largest city in the United States pulled off a daylight robbery at the point of guns that for daring and disregard of life is enough to turn a man's blood cold. This we have proved, not alone by the testimony of the accomplices but by corroborative evidence so overwhelming, so conclusive, and so inexplicable that no other conclusion can be drawn but that all are guilty."

The accident happened when he was about to losen a rope which held a tank suspended in the air.

THE EXAMPLE OF AMERICA

At the American Legion convention in Kansas City the duty of citizenship with special reference to the community before the organized ex-service men was the keynote of a number of speakers. All this acquires a deeper significance than usual from the fact that we are on the eve of a most momentous conference of the nations. Our own military leaders and the greatest soldiers of foreign lands emphasized the importance of America's services in winning the war but above all the verbal glorification, not in the least to be despised, stood out the truth that the greatest possible service to mankind is to be performed through the maintenance of peace.

We cannot doubt that the grizzled warriors who honored the Legion convention by their presence and who were in turn honored by their American comrades in arms have gained a better understanding than they had before of the importance of abolishing war and that their influence will be accomplishing that will be exerted the more insistently in consequence of the opportunity they have to see our country moving forward under the inspiration of peacetime conditions.

OUR WAR HEROES

Sergeant Samuel Woodfill, whose home is in Bellview, Ind., has been called to public attention by General Pershing as one of three greatest individual heroes of the war. Single-handed he slew nineteen German soldiers and captured three machine gun nests. We have heard much of Sergeant York, who captured 132 Germans, and of Major Whittlesey, and his men of the "lost battalion," but the feat of Sergeant Woodfill, hitherto has had little notice except in an official way, though he was granted the Medal of Honor by Congress and numerous other decorations. From the time that has elapsed and the fact that he has remained so long unknown, it would appear that he is not a self-advertiser. In fact a man who exhibits the courage that brings conspicuous recognition rarely is of the disposition to go about blowing a horn. The two attributes are incompatible.

It is proper that honor due should be accorded men who perform notable feats in the face of danger and it is gratifying that so many escaped the perils of the battlefield after showing the mettle they possessed. But how many others there may have been who possessed equal courage and who made equally valiant attempts, yet perished in the efforts leaving no record of their daring. Had any one of these men who stand out as conspicuous heroes been killed it is possible that all evidence of their efforts would have disappeared with them. All three were in deadly peril so that something must be credited to good fortune in that they were enabled to make their execution so frightful and in the end to escape unscathed.

ARE WE LOSING THE HOME?

Much has been said with tongue and pen on the subject of home life in America. There are untold volumes of printed matter seting forth the fact that today the home is not doing either for children or grown-ups the things for which it was designed—the providing of opportunities for a wholesome family life. And in these volumes there probably may be found some suggestions on how it is possible to make the modern home yield these opportunities.

But unless we address ourselves actively to the task of putting into practice our voluminous preaching on this subject we shall not advance greatly toward a solution of the problem.

It would be folly to regard this thing lightly and to hold that it will remedy itself. No permanently wholesome life either in the community or for the nation can be built on a substantial basis unless home life and home training play a great part in this process. The situation is not to be taken lightly. Nor will it remedy itself in the course of time. As this educator maintains, we are going in a direction away from it.

The obvious conclusion is that if we cherish ideals that make for desirable manhood and womanhood and for a more efficient citizenship, we can not afford to lose sight of the fact that these ideals are best maintained in the home. Other institutions may help in this process; but they can only help, they can not supplant the home. It may be that the writing of many books on this subject and the delivering of many lectures will help us to realize this; and to that end they serve a good purpose. But the real remedy to the waning influence of the home lies in a thorough recognition of what we are losing when home and family life become les important with us, and in a resolute determination to prevent this at all cost.

Mrs. H. P. Barrett, of Republic, suburb of Birmingham, Ala., gives the facts of her remarkable experience with Tanlac as follows:

"During the past fourteen years I have spent more than one thousand dollars trying to get rid of a complaint that was gradually sapping my strength, but until I got hold of Tanlac nothing helped me. For the past four years I have lived almost entirely on milk and bread and finally even that went against me.

"Before I had finished the first bottle of Tanlac I got so I could eat anything and I certainly bless the day I first got this medicine for I believe it has added years to my life. The people in my neighborhood were so surprised at the change in me that fourteen of them by actual count are now taking Tanlac."

LIVED YEARS ON BREAD AND MILK

FOR MORE THAN A DECADE MALADY OF ALABAMA WOMAN WAS CONTINUALLY SAPPING HER STRENGTH

Mrs. H. P. Barrett, of Republic, suburb of Birmingham, Ala., gives the facts of her remarkable experience with Tanlac as follows:

"During the past fourteen years I have spent more than one thousand dollars trying to get rid of a complaint that was gradually sapping my strength, but until I got hold of Tanlac nothing helped me. For the past four years I have lived almost entirely on milk and bread, and finally even that went against me.

"Before I had finished the first bottle of Tanlac I got so I could eat anything, and I certainly bless the day I first got this medicine for I believe it has added years to my life. The people in my neighborhood were so surprised at the change in me that fourteen of them by actual count are now taking Tanlac."

But he was talking to himself. Down the docks Hicks and Flaherty were racing for the respective commands, each shouting to his night watchman to pipe all hands on deck. Fortunately, a goodly head of steam was up in each tug's boilers; because of the fog and the liability to collisions and consequent hasty summons, one engineer on each tug was on duty. Out through the Gate they nosed their way, heaving the lead continuously, made a wide detour around Mile rock and the Seal rocks, swung a mile to the south of the position of the Maggie, and then came cautiously up the coast, whistling continuously to acquaint the Yankee Prince with their presence in the neighborhood. In anticipation of the necessity for replying to this welcome sound, Captain Scraggs and Mr. Gibney had, for the past two hours, busied themselves getting up another head of steam in the Maggie's boilers, repairing the whistle and splicing the wires of the engine room telegraph. Like the wise men they were, however, they declined to sound the Maggie's siren until the tugs were quite close. Even then, Mr. Gibney shuddered, but needs must when the devil drives, so he pulled the whistle cord and was rewarded with a weird, mournful grunt, dying away into a gasp.

"Must have taken on some of that dirty Asiatic water." Dan Hicks soliloquized, "and now her tubes have gone to glory."

Immediately both tugs kicked ahead under a dead slow bell, guided by a series of toots as brief as Mr. Gibney could make them, and presently both tug lookouts reported breakers dead ahead.

Dan Hicks sent a man forward to heave the lead under the nose of the Aphrodite, which was edging in gingerly toward the voice. He had a searchlight, but he did not attempt to use it, knowing full well that in such a fog it would be of no avail. Guided, therefore, by the bellowings of Mr. Gibney, reinforced by the shrill yips of Captain Scraggs, the tug crept in closer and closer, and when it seemed that they must be within a hundred feet of the surf, Dan Hicks trained his Lyle gun in the direction of Mr. Gibney's voice and shot a heaving line into the fog.

Almost simultaneous with the report of the gun came a shriek of pain from Captain Scraggs. Straight and true the wet, heavy knotted end of the heaving line came in over the Maggie's quarter and struck him in the mouth. In the darkness he staggered back from the stinging blow, clutched wildly at the air, slipped and rolled over among the vegetables with the precious rope clasped to his breast.

"I got it," he sputtered, "I got it, Gib."

They met it at the taffrail as it came up out of the breakers, wet but welcome. "Pass it around the mainmast, Scraggy," Mr. Gibney cautioned. "If we make fast to the towin' bits, the first jerk'll pull the anchor bolts up through the deck."

When the hawser had been made fast to the mainmast, the leathern lungs of Mr. Gibney made due announcement of the fact to the expectant Captain Hicks. "As soon as you feel you've got a grip on her," he yelled, "just hold her steady so she won't drive further up the beach when I get my anchor up. She'll come out like a loose tooth at the top of the flood."

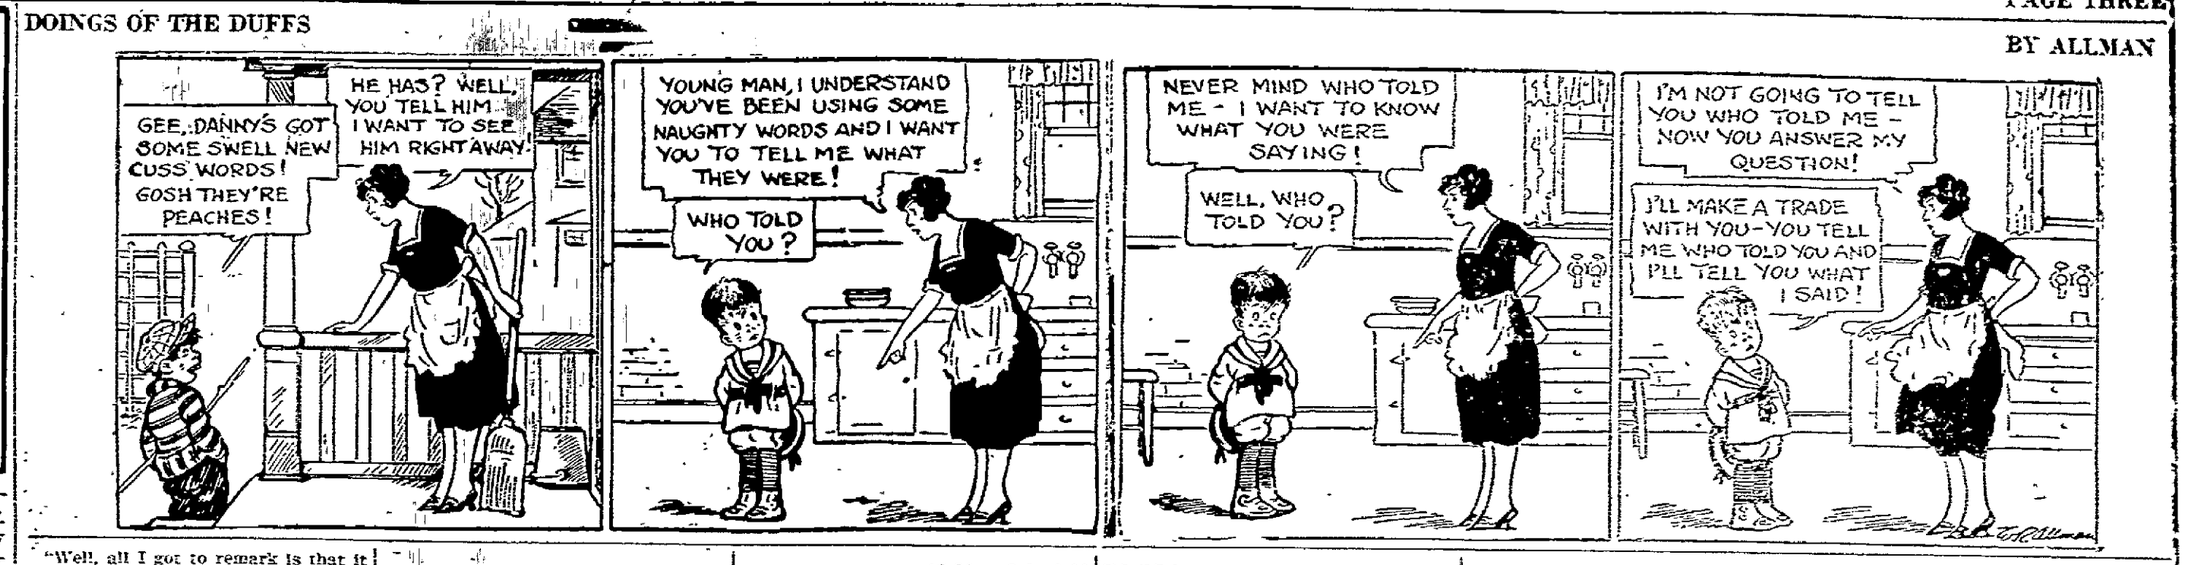
The Aphrodite forged slowly ahead, taking in the slack of the hawser. Twenty minutes later, after much backing and swearing and heaving of lines the Bodega's hawser was also put board the Maggie. Mr. Gibney judged it would be safe now to fasten this line to the towing bits.

Suddenly Captain Scraggs remembered there was no one on duty in the Maggie's engine room. With a half sob, he slid down the greasy ladder, tore open the furnace doors and commenced shoveling in coal with a recklessness that bordered on insanity. When the indicator showed eighty pounds of steam he came up on deck and discovered Mr. Gibney walking solemnly round and round the little capstan up forward. It was creaking and groaning dismally. Captain Scraggs thrust his engine room torch above his head to light the scene and gazed upon his navigating officer in blank amazement.

"What foolishness is this, Gib?" he demanded. "Are you clean daffy, doin' a barn dance around that rusty capstan, makin' a noise fit to frighten the fish?"

"Not much," came the laconic reply. "I'm a smart man. I'm raisin' both anchors."

DOINGS OF THE DUFFS BY ALLMAN



"Well, all I got to remark is that it takes a smart man to raise both anchors when we only got one anchor to our blessed name. An' with that anchor safe on the fo'castle head, I, for one, can't see no sense in raisin' it."

"You tarnation jackass!" sighed Gibney. "You forget who we are. Do you s'pose the steamer Yankee Prince can lay on the beach all night with both anchors out, an' then be got ready to tow off in three shakes of a lamb's tail? It takes noise to get up two anchors—so I'm makin' all the noise I can. Got any steam?"

"Eighty pounds," Scraggs confessed. Having for the moment forgotten his identity, he was confused in the presence of the superior intelligence of his navigating officer.

"Run aft, then, Scraggs, an' turn that cargo winch over to beat the band until I tell you to stop. With the drum runnin' free she'll make noise enough for a winch three times her size, but you might give the necessary yells to make it more lifelike."

Captain Scraggs fled to the winch. At the end of five minutes, Mr. Gibney appeared and bade him desist. Then, turning his improvised megaphone seaward he adddressed an imaginary mate: "Mr. Thompson, have you got your port anchor up?"

Scraggs took the cue immediately. "All clear forward, sir," he piped.

"Send the bosun for'd an' heave the lead, Mr. Thompson."

"Very well, sir."

Here The Squarehead, who had been enjoying the unique situation immensely, decided to take a hand. Presently, in sing-song cadence, he was reporting the depth of water alongside.

"That'll do, bosun," Gibney thundered. Then, in his natural voice, to Scraggs: "All set, Scraggsy. Guess we're ready to be pulled off. Get down in the engine room and stand by for full speed ahead when I give the word."

"Quick! Hurry!" Scraggs entreated as he disappeared through the little engine-room hatch, for the tide was now at the tip of the flood and the Maggie was bumping wickedly and driving further up the beach. Mr. Gibney turned his stovepipe seaward and shouted: "Tugboats, ahoy!"

"Ahoy!" they answered in unison.

"All ready! Let'er go-o-o-o!"

The Squarehead stationed himself at the bitts with a lantern and Mr. Gibney hastened to the pilot house and took his place at the wheel. When the hawsers commenced to lift out of the sea, The Squarehead gave a warning shout, whereupon Mr. Gibney called the engine room. "Give her the gun," he commanded Scraggs. "Pull against them tugs for all you're worth. Remember this is the steamer Yankee Prince. We must not come off too readily."

Captain Scraggs opened the throttle, and while the two tugs steadily drew her off into deep water, the Maggie fought valiantly to stick to the beach and even to continue her interrupted journey overland. She merely succeeded in stretching both hawsers taut; slowly she was drawn seaward, stern first, and at the expiration of fifteen minutes' steady pulling, Mr. Gibney could restrain himself no longer. He rang for full speed astern—and got it promptly. Then, calling Neils Halvorsen to aid him, he abandoned the wheel and scrambled aft.

With no one at the wheel, the Maggie shot off at a tangent and the hawsers slacked immediately. In the twinkling of an eye Mr. Gibney had cast them off, and as the ends disappeared with a swish over the stern he ran back to the pilot house, rang for full speed ahead, put his helm hard over, and headed the Maggie in the general direction of China, although as a matter of fact he cared not what direction he pursued, provided he got away from the beach and placed distance between the Maggie and two soon-to-be-furious tugboat skippers.

CHAPTER IV.

The crews of the Aphrodite and the Bodega slept late, for they were weary and, fortunately, no calls for a tug came into the office of the Red Stack company all morning. About ten o'clock Dan Hicks and Jack Flaherty breakfasted and about ten-thirty both met in the office. Apparently they were two souls with but a single thought, for the right hand of each sought the shelf whereon reposed the blue volume entitled "Lloyd's Register." Dan Hicks reached it first, carried it to the counter, wet his tarry index finger and started turning the pages in a vain search for the American steamer Yankee Prince. Presently he looked up at Jack Flaherty.

"Flaherty," he said, "I think you're

a liar."

"The same to you and many of them," Flaherty replied, not a bit abashed. "You said she was an eight thousand-ton tramp."

"I never went so far as to say I'd been aboard her on trial trip, though—and did cut down her tonnage, showin' I got the fragments of a conscience left," Hicks defended himself.

He closed the book with a sigh and placed it back on the shelf, just as the door opened to admit no less personage than Bartholomew McGuffey, late chief engineer, first assistant, second assistant, third assistant, wiper, oiler, water-tender and stoker of the S. S. Maggie. With a brief nod to Jack Flaherty Mr. McGuffey approached Dan Hicks.

"I been lookin' for you, captain," he announced. "Say, I hear the chief o' the Aphrodite's goin' to take a three months' layoff to get shet of his rheumatism. Is that straight?"

"I believe it is, McGuffey."

"Well, say, I'd like to have a chance to substitoot for him. You know my capabilities, Hicks, an' if it would be agreeable to you to have me for your chief your recommendation would go a long way toward landin' me the job. I'd sure make them engines behave."

"What vessel have you been on lately?" Hicks demanded cautiously, for he knew Mr. McGuffey's reputation for non-reliability around pay day.

"Did you quit or did Scraggs fire you?"

"He fired me," McGuffey replied honestly. "If he hadn't I'd have quit, so it's a toss-up. Comin' in from Halfmoon bay last night we got in the fog an' piled up on the beach just below the Cliff house—"

"This is interesting," Jack Flaherty murmured. "You say she walked ashore on you, McGuffey? Well, I'll be shot!"

"She did. Scraggs blamed it on me, Flaherty. He said I didn't obey the signals from the bridge, one word led to another, an' he went dancin' mad an' ordered me off his ship. Well, it's his ship—or it was his ship, for I'll bet a dollar she's ground to powder by now—so all I could do was obey. I hopped overboard an' waded ashore. I suppose all my clothes an' things is gone by now. I left everything aboard an' had to borrow this outfit from Scab Johnny." He grinned pathetically. "So I guess you understand, Captain Hicks, just how bad I need that [illegible] about a minute ago."

The Green Pea Pirates

But he was talking to himself. Down the docks Hicks and Flaherty were racing for the respective commands, each shouting to his night watchman to pipe all hands on deck. Fortunately, a goodly head of steam was up in each tug's boilers; because of the fog and the liability to collisions and consequent hasty summons, one engineer on each tug was on duty. Out through the Gate they nosed their way, heaving the lead continuously, made a wide detour around Mile rock and the Seal rocks, swung a mile to the south of the position of the Maggie, and then came cautiously up the coast, whistling continuously to acquaint the Yankee Prince with their presence in the neighborhood. In anticipation of the necessity for replying to this welcome sound, Captain Scraggs and Mr. Gibney had, for the past two hours, busied themselves getting up another head of steam in the Maggie's boilers, repairing the whistle and splicing the wires of the engine room telegraph. Like the wise men they were, however, they declined to sound the Maggie's siren until the tugs were quite close. Even then, Mr. Gibney shuddered, but needs must when the devil drives, so he pulled the whistle cord and was rewarded with a weird, mournful grunt, dying away into a gasp.

"Must have taken on some of that dirty Asiatic water," Dan Hicks soliloquized, "and now her tubes have gone to glory."

Immediately both tugs kicked ahead under a dead slow bell, guided by a series of toots as brief as Mr. Gibney could make them, and presently both tug lookouts reported breakers dead ahead.

Dan Hicks sent a man forward to heate the lead under the nose of the Aphrodite, which was edging in gingerly toward the voice. He had a searchlight, but he did not attempt to use it, knowing full well that in such a fog it would be of no avail. Guided, therefore, by the bellowings of Mr. Gibney, reinforced by the shrill yips of Captain Scraggs, the tug crept in closer and closer, and when it seemed that they must be within a hundred feet of the surf, Dan Hicks trained his Lyle gun in the direction of Mr. Gibney's voice and shot a heaving line into the fog.

Almost simultaneous with the report of the gun came a shriek of pain from Captain Scraggs. Straight and true the wet, heavy knotted end of the heaving line came to over the Maggie's quarter and struck him in the mouth. In the darkness he staggered back from the stinging blow, clutched wildly at the air, slipped and rolled over among the vegetables with the precious rope clasped to his breast.

"I got it," he sputtered, "I got it, Gib."

They met it at the taffrail as it came up out of the breakers, wet but welcome. "Pass it around the mainmast, Scraggy," Mr. Gibney cautioned. "If we make fast to the towin' bits, the first jerk'll pull the anchor bolts up through the deck."

When the hawser had been made fast to the mainmast, the leathern lungs of Mr. Gibney made due announcement of the fact to the expectant Captain Hicks. "As soon as you feel you've got a grip on her," he yelled, "just hold her steady so she won't drive further up the beach when I get my anchor up. She'll come out like a loose tooth at the top of the flood."

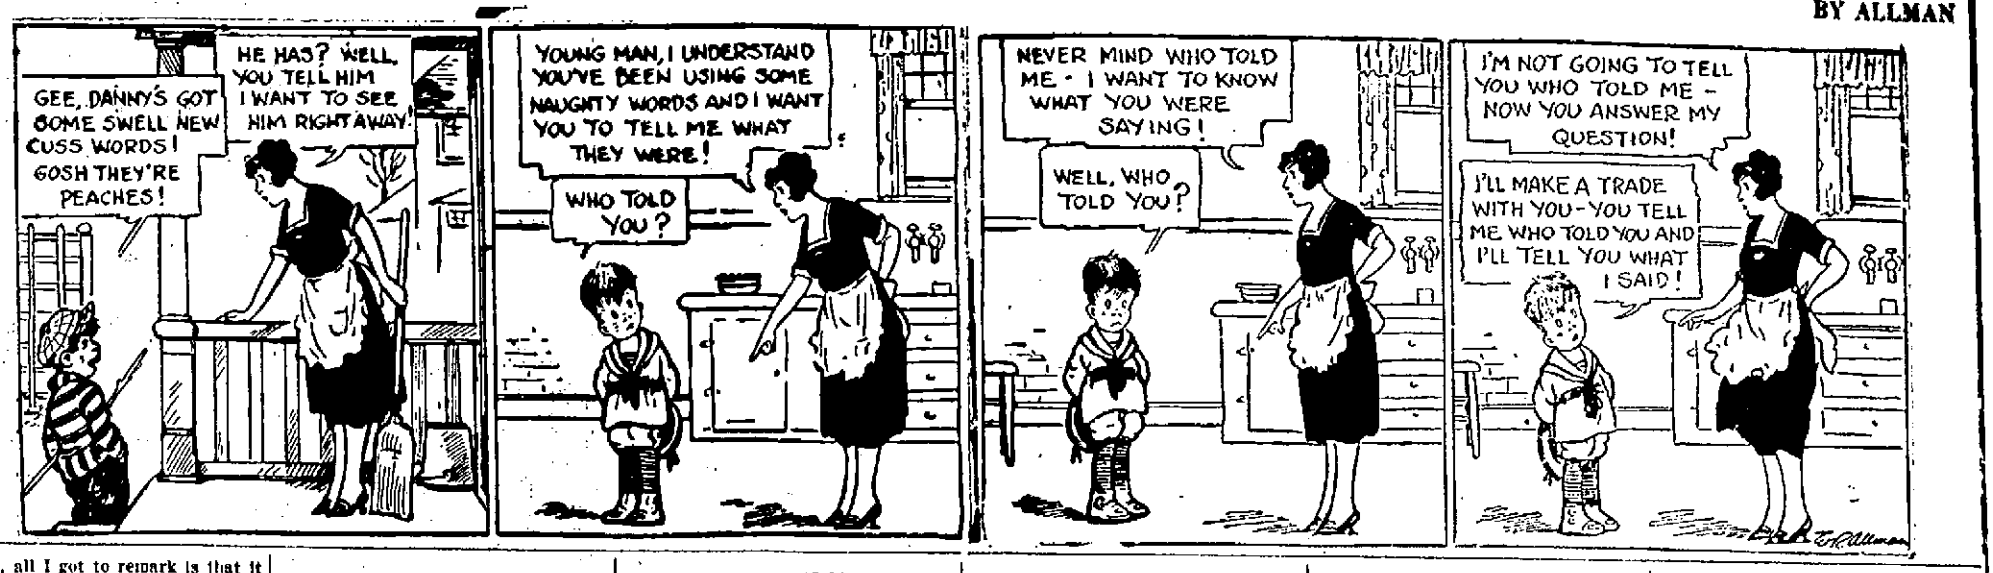
The Aphrodite forged slowly ahead, taking in the slack of the hawser. Twenty minutes later, after much backing and swearing and heaving of lines the Bodega's hawser was also put board the Maggie. Mr. Gibney judged it would be safe now to fasten this line to the towing bits.

Suddenly Captain Scraggs remembered there was no one on duty in the Maggie's engine room. With a half sob, he slid down the greasy ladder, tore open the furnace doors and commenced shoveling in coal with a recklessness that bordered on insanity. When the indicator showed eighty pounds of steam he came up on deck and discovered Mr. Gibney walking solemnly round and round the little capstan up forward. It was creaking and groaning dismally. Captain Scraggs thrust his engine room torch above his head to light the scene and gazed upon his navigating officer in blank amazement.

"What foolishness is this, Gib?" he demanded. "Are you clean daffy, doin' a barn dance around that rusty capstan, makin' a noise fit to frighten the fish?"

"Not much," came the laconic reply. "I'm a smart man. I'm raisin' both anchors."

DOINGS OF THE DUFFS BY ALLMAN



"Well, all I got to remark is that it takes a smart man to raise both anchors when we only got one anchor to our blessed name. An' with that anchor safe on the fo'castle head, I, for one, can't see no sense in raisin' it."

"You turnation jackass!" sighed Gibney. "You forget who we are. Do you s'pose the steamer Yankee Prince can lay on the beach all night with both anchors out, an' then be got ready to tow off in three shakes of a lamb's tail? It takes noise to get up two anchors—so I'm makin' all the noise I can. Got any steam?"

"Eighty pounds," Scraggs confessed. Having for the moment forgotten his identity, he was confused in the presence of the superior intelligence of his navigating officer.

"Run aft, then, Scraggs, an' turn that cargo winch over to beat the band until I tell you to stop. With the drum runnin' free she'll make noise enough for a winch three times her size, but you might give the necessary yells to make it more lifelike."

Captain Scraggs fled to the winch. At the end of five minutes, Mr. Gibney appeared and bade him desist. Then, turning his improvised megaphone seaward he addressed an imaginary mate: "Mr. Thompson, have you got your port anchor up?"

Scraggs took the cue immediately. "All clear forward, sir," he piped.

"Send the bosun for'd an' heave the lead, Mr. Thompson."

"Very well, sir."

Here The Squarehead, who had been enjoying the unique situation immensely, decided to take a hand. Presently, in sing-song cadence, he was reporting the depth of water alongside.

"That'll do, bosun," Gibney thundered. Then, in his natural voice, to Scraggs: "All set, Scruggsy. Guess we're ready to be pulled off. Get down in the engine room and stand by for full speed ahead when I give the word."

"Quick! Hurry!" Scraggs entreated as he disappeared through the little engine-room hatch, for the tide was now at the tip of the flood and the Maggie was bumping wickedly and driving further up the beach. Mr. Gibney turned his stovepipe seaward and shouted: "Tugboats, ahoy!"

"Ahoy!" they answered in unison.

The Squarehead stationed himself at the bitts with a lantern and Mr. Gibney hastened to the pilot house and took his place at the wheel. When the hawsers commenced to lift out of the sea, The Squarehead gave a warning shout, whereupon Mr. Gibney called the engine room. "Give her the gun," he commanded Scraggs. "Pull against them tugs for all you're worth. Remember this is the steamer Yankee Prince. We must not come off too readily."

Captain Scraggs opened the throttle, and while the two tugs steadily drew her off into deep water, the Maggie fought valiantly to stick to the beach and even to continue her interrupted journey overland. She merely succeeded in stretching both hawsers taut; slowly she was drawn seaward, stern first, and at the expiration of fifteen minutes' steady pulling, Mr. Gibney could restrain himself no longer. He rang for full speed astern—and got it promptly. Then, calling Nels Halvorsen to aid him, he abandoned the wheel and scrambled aft.

With no one at the wheel, the Maggie shot off at a tangent and the hawsers slacked immediately. In the twinkling of an eye Mr. Gibney had cast them off, and as the ends disappeared with a swish over the stern he ran back to the pilot house, rang for full speed ahead, put his helm hard over, and headed the Maggie in the general direction of China, although as a matter of fact he cared not what direction he pursued, provided he got away from the beach and placed distance between the Maggie and two soon-to-be-furious tugboat skippers.

CHAPTER IV.

The crews of the Aphrodite and the Bodega slept late, for they were weary and, fortunately, no calls for a tug came into the office of the Red Stack company all morning. About ten o'clock Dan Hicks and Jack Flaherty breakfasted and about ten-thirty both met in the office. Apparently they were two souls with but a single thought, for the right hand of each sought the shelf whereon reposed the blue volume entitled "Lloyd's Register." Dan Hicks reached it first, carried it to the counter, wet his tarry index finger and started turning the pages in a vain search for the American steamer Yankee Prince. Presently he looked up at Jack Flaherty.

"Flaherty," he said, "I think you're a liar."

"The same to you and many of them," Flaherty replied, not a bit abashed. "You said she was an eight thousand-ton tramp."

"I never went so far as to say I'd been aboard her on trial trip, though—and did cut down her tonnage, showin' I got the fragments of a conscience left," Hicks defended himself.

He closed the book with a sigh and placed it back on the shelf, just as the door opened to admit no less personage than Bartholomew McGuffey, late chief engineer, first assistant, second assistant, third assistant, wiper, oiler, water-tender and stoker of the S. S. Maggie. With a brief nod to Jack Flaherty Mr. McGuffey approached Dan Hicks.

"I been lookin' for you, captain," he announced. "Say, I hear the chief o' the Aphrodite's goin' to take a three months' layoff to get shet of his rheumatism. Is that straight?"

"I believe it is, McGuffey."

"Well, say, I'd like to have a chance to substitoot for him. You know my capabilities, Hicks, an' if it would be agreeable to you to have me for your chief your recommendation would go a long way toward landin' me the job. I'd sure make them engines behave."

"What vessel have you been on lately?" Hicks demanded cautiously, for he knew Mr. McGuffey's reputation for non-reliability around pay day.

"Did you quit or did Scraggs fire you?"

"He fired me," McGuffey replied honestly. "If he hadn't I'd have quit, so it's a toss-up. Comin' in from Halfmoon bay last night we got in the fog an' piled up on the beach jus below the Cliff house—"

"This is interesting," Jack Flaherty murmured. "You say she walked ashore on you, McGuffey? Well, I'll be shot!"

"She did. Scraggs blamed it on me, Flaherty. He said I didn't obey the signals from the bridge, one word led to another, an' he went dancin' mad an' ordered me off his ship. Well, it's his ship—or it was his ship, for I'll bet a dollar she's ground to powder by now—so all I could do was obey. I hopped overboard an' waded ashore. I suppose all my clothes an' things is gone by now. I left everything aboard an' had to borrow this outfit from Scab Johnny." He grinned pathetically. "So I guess you understand, Captain Hicks, just how bad I need that job I spoke about a minute ago."

FASHION NOTES

Stout Fashions.

New York—Never before have fashions been such a boon to stout women as they are this season. Up in Philadelphia Jack O'Brien's gymnasium in Madison Square Garden a class of fifty women are working every day on a course of flesh reduction. In their gymnasium costumes they are not stout—they are fat, but when they are dressed for the street, many of they appear pounds lighter. This appearance is due to careful costuming which emphasized the long lines and the straight silhouette and conceals the superabundant curves so evident on the gymnasium floor. One such costume recently noted was of poiret twill with a satin charmeuse underskirt with the skirt slashed to the hip at either side and a loose girdle emphasizing the long waist line. A long narrow "V" shaped collar and neck opening lightened the heaviness of both chin and bust. This costume was completed by a long straight coat, fur trimmed but with the bands so arranged as to lengthen rather than broaden the figure.

The dealers offering these and other similar pictures guaranteed them as coming from the various royal palaces. The pictures are to be taken to the United States and to England, where the dealers hope the markets will be better.

FASHION NOTES

Stout Fashions.

New York—Never before have fashions been such a boon to stout women as they are this season. Up in Philadelphia Jack O'Brien's gymnasium in Madison Square Garden a class of fifty women are working every day on a course of flesh reduction. In their gymnasium costumes they are not stout—they are fat, but when they are dressed for the street, many of they appear pounds lighter This appearance is due to careful costuming which emphasized the long lines and the straight silhoutte and conceals the superabundant curves so evident on the gymnasium floor. One such costume recently noted was of poirot twill with a satin charmeuse underskirt with the skirt slashed to the hip at either side and a loose girdle emphasizing the long waist line. A long narrow "V" shaped collar and neck opening lightened the heaviness of both chin and bust. This costume was completed by a long straight coat, fur trimmed but with the bands so arranged as to lengthen rather than broaden the figure.

BADGERS TAKING NO CHANCES ON MICHIGAN GAME

Madison—Although the weatherman interfered with a good practice Monday Coach John Richards sent his varsity gridders through a short, snappy scrimmage against the ineligibles who used Wolverine formations. The workout was secret and just what combinations the coach is evolving to smash the Yostmen remains unknown. The backfield still is uncertain with a possibility of either Gibson or Williams opening against the Wolverines next Saturday.

The line appears set, with Gould and Tebell at ends, Brader and Brumm, tackles, and Hohfeldt and Christiansen, guards, while Bunge does the center duties. All of the men are in A1 condition, and Richards is working with them, ever watchful that no unnecessary chances are taken on hurting his regulars. Gill is being drilled on drop kicking, while Tebell and Elliott with Capt. Sundt take daily shots at the crossbars from placement. There is no intention to have Steketee's toe unopposed in the local camp.

No Overconfidence

With the unexpected defeat of Chicago before them as an example, there has been a decidedly noticeable slump of "cockiness on the part of both student body and squad. The idea that Michigan was "easy" has completely disappeared, and every effort is now being bent to send a grimly determined team onto the field Saturday. Wisconsin supporters realize that they not only have to fight hard to stay in the race for the title, but also will have to beat both Michigan and Chicago worse than the Buckeyes did in order to establish the best claim to a championship.

Evening blackboard sessions are on every night now. From one to two hours is spent after supper in drilling the whole squad on formations and defenses against the enemy plays. If weather continues unfavorable, these drills will probably be lengthened.

Staleness is also being guarded against by the Badger mentor. The men have had a good rest, however, and can be counted on in this respect unless driven too hard. A forty minute scrimmage is on tap for each night the rest of the week.

Mail order seat sales are about completed. Nearly 20,000 tickets have already been sold. There will be plenty of seats.

FORWARD PASS STARTLES EAST

New York—Forward passing on the gridiron so spectacular and interesting to spectators had its first and real development in the west. Less than ten years ago when eastern coaches still clung to the old fashioned line smashing game the west made considerable headway with the new open attack. In those days forward passes were known as radical plays by conservative coaches who were blind to the great possibilities of the overhead system.

Notre Dame was a pioneer among the western teams in perfecting the aerial attack. Notre Dame invaded West Point a few seasons ago and caught the cadets napping with their complicated passing. The westerners ever since have come to this section with a baffling aerial offense. This year was no exception.

Saturday at West Point the soldiers needed a fleet of airplanes to cope with the overhead game of the westerners. The cadets were powerless against the campaign of Mohardt and Kiley that manipulated the passes for the visitors. Notre Dame won, 28 to 0, mainly because the Army couldn't defend itself against a clever passing system.

MICKIE SAYS

Tie Games; Are They Victories?

Team	G. Played	Won	Lost	Tied	Pct.
Merrill	5	1	2		.800
Stevens Point	4	1	0		.750
Wisconsin Rapids	4	1	1		.750
Wausau	5	2	0		.600
Antigo	5	2	0		.600
Marshfield	4	3	1		.250
Rhinelander	3	3	0		.000

Team	Won	Lost	pct.
Stevens Point	3	1	.750
Merrill	2	1	.667
Wisconsin Rapids	2	1	.667
Wausau	3	2	.600
Antigo	3	2	.600
Marshfield	0	3	.000
Rhinelander	0	3	.000

In this table only games definitely decided one way or the other were taken into consideration, with the result that Antigo and Wausau, having no tie games against them, were perhaps unfairly treated.

From their standpoint, the following table, which shows the actual percentage of games played won by each team, is undoubtedly the most satisfactory:

	Won	Lost	Tied	Pct.
Stevens Point	3	1	0	.750
Wausau	3	2	0	.667
Antigo	3	2	0	.667
Wisconsin Rapids	2	1	1	.500
Merrill	2	1	2	.400
Marshfield	0	3	1	.000
Rhinelander	0	3	0	.000

This gives tie games the same value in the percentage column as games lost, which is surely just as fair as counting them as games won.

The Tribune believes that the only fair way to handle the question is to follow the customary procedure of leaving tie games out of the percentage tables altogether.

MARQUETTE PLANS TO CELEBRATE HOMECOMING

Milwaukee, Wis.—Homecoming at the University of Marquette will be held Nov. 18 and 19, Saturday on which date the Marquette eleven will meet Notre Dame.

Final plans have been completed by the local chapter of the University Alumni association. A mass meeting on the campus will open the two day reunion Friday. Football men of former years are to speak. There will also be class reunions, and registration of old grads. In the evening a theater party will be held at one of the local houses at which after the regular program has been given Marquette students will entertain.

PLAN INTER-SECTIONAL CONTEST AT PASADENA

Pasadena, Cal.—Preparations are under way for the next annual football game between eastern and western intercollegiate champions to be held here New Year's Day under the auspices of the Pasadena Tournament of Roses Association.

The association officials have no teams in mind yet for the game and no invitations will be sent until the close of the various conference football seasons.

Last year the University of California, Pacific Coast Conference champion, defeated Ohio State University, Big Ten title holder. In 1919 game the University of Oregon, coast champion, lost to Harvard University.

The Tournament of Roses Association is planing to build a stadium for the big game and announced five-year and ten-year ticket books would be sold, beginning November 1, 1921, the proceeds to be devoted to the stadium construction. The stadium however, will not be ready for the 1921 game.

BADGERS TAKING NO CHANCES ON MICHIGAN GAME

Madison—Although the weather-man interfered with a good practice Monday Coach John Richards sent his varsity gridders through a short, snappy scrimmage against the ineligibles who used Wolverine formations. The workout was secret and just what combinations the coach is evolving to smash the Yostmen remains unknown. The backfield still is uncertain with a possibility of either Gibson or Williams opening against the Wolverines next Saturday.

The line appears set, with Gould and Tebell at ends, Brader and Brumm, tackles, and Hohfeldt and Christiansen, guards, while Bunge does the center duties. All of the men are in A1 condition, and Richards is working with them, ever watchful that no unnecessary chances are taken on hurting his regulars. Gill is being drilled on drop kicking, while Tebell and Elliott with Capt. Sundt take daily shots at the crossbars from placement. There is no intention to have Steketee's toe unopposed in the local camp.

No Overconfidence

With the unexpected defeat of Chicago before them as an example, there has been a decidedly noticeable slump of "cockiness on the part of both student body and squad. The idea that Michigan was "easy" has completely disappeared, and every effort is now being bent to send a grimly determined team onto the field Saturday. Wisconsin supporters realize that they not only have to fight hard to stay in the race for the title, but also will have to beat both Michigan and Chicago worse than the Buckeyes did in order to establish the best claim to a championship.

Evening blackboard sessions are on every night now. From one to two hours is spent after supper in drilling the whole squad on formations and defenses against the enemy plays. If weather continues unfavorable, these drills will probably be lengthened.

Staleness is also being guarded against by the Badger mentor. The men have had a good rest, however, and can be counted on in this respect unless driven too hard. A forty minute scrimmage is on tap for each night the rest of the week.

Mail order seat sales are about completed. Nearly 20,000 tickets have already been sold. There will be plenty of seats.

FORWARD PASS STARTLES EAST

New York—Forward passing on the gridiron so spectacular and interesting to spectators had its first and real development in the west. Less than ten years ago when eastern coaches still clung to the old fashioned line smashing game, the west made considerable headway with the new open attack. In those days forward passes were known as radical plays by conservative coaches who were blind to the great possibilities of the overhead system.

Notre Dame was a pioneer among the western teams in perfecting the aerial attack. Notre Dame invaded West Point a few seasons ago and caught the cadets napping with their complicated passing. The westerners ever since have come to this section with a baffling aerial offense. This year was no exception.

Saturday at West Point the soldiers needed a fleet of airplanes to cope with the overhead game of the westerners. The cadets were powerless against the campaign of Mohardt and Kiley that manipulated the passes for the visitors. Notre Dame won, 28 to 0, mainly because the Army couldn't defend itself against a clever passing system.

MICKIE SAYS

Tie Games; Are They Victories?

Team	G. Played	Lost	Tied	Pct.
Merrill	5	1	2	.800
Stevens Point	4	1	0	.750
Wisconsin Rapids	4	1	1	.750
Wausau	5	2	0	.600
Antigo	5	2	0	.600
Marshfield	4	3	1	.250
Rhinelander	3	3	0	.000

Team	Won	lost	pct.
Stevens Point	3	1	.750
Merrill	2	1	.667
Wisconsin Rapids	2	1	.667
Wausau	3	2	.600
Antigo	3	2	.600
Marshfield	0	3	.000
Rhinelander	0	3	.000

In this table only games definitely decided one way or the other were taken into consideration, with the result that Antigo and Wausau, having no tie games against them, were perhaps unfairly treated.

From their standpoint, the following table, which shows the actual percentage of games played won by each team, is undoubtedly the most satisfactory:

	Won	Lost	Tied	Pct.
Stevens Point	3	1	0	.750
Wausau	3	2	0	.667
Antigo	3	2	0	.667
Wisconsin Rapids	2	1	1	.500
Merrill	2	1	2	.100
Marshfield	0	3	1	.000
Rhinelander	0	3	0	.000

This gives tie games the same value in the percentage column as games lost, which is surely just as fair as counting them as games won.

The Tribune believes that the only fair way to handle the question is to follow the customary procedure of leaving tie games out of the percentage tables altogether.

MARQUETTE PLANS TO CELEBRATE HOMECOMING

Milwaukee, Wis.—Homecoming at the University of Marquette will be held Nov. 18 and 19, Saturday on which date the Marquette eleven will meet Notre Dame.

Final plans have been completed by the local chapter of the University Alumni association. A mass meeting on the campus will open the two day reunion Friday. Football men of former years are to speak. There will also be class reunions, and registration of old grads. In the evening a theater party will be held at one of the local houses at which after the regular program has been given Marquette students will entertain.

PLAN INTER-SECTIONAL CONTEST AT PASADENA

Pasadena, Cal.—Preparations are under way for the next annual football game between eastern and western intercollegiate champions to be held here New Year's Day under the auspices of the Pasadena Tournament of Roses Association.

The association officials have no teams in mind yet for the game and no invitations will be sent until the close of the various conference football seasons.

Last year the University of California, Pacific Coast Conference champion, defeated Ohio State University, Big Ten title holder. In 1919 game the University of Oregon, coast champion, lost to Harvard University.

The Tournament of Roses Association is planing to build a stadium for the big game and announced five-year and ten-year ticket books would be sold, beginning November 1, 1921, the proceeds to be devoted to the stadium construction. The stadium however, will not be ready for the 1921 game.

Zion City is to tax rootsers. It would look funny, wouldn't it, if the chanticleers should refuse to bring up the sun for it?

Member of Pioneer Rapids Family Recommends Kozak

"I was so weak I was unable to walk across the floor." Today, I do my own washing—am fully cured, and feel fine."

So declared Mrs. Louis Leaman, R. F. D. 4, Wisconsin Rapids, a well known and highly respected member of the Lutheran Church, Saturday. "I suffered from stomach trouble, palpitation of the heart, loss of appetite and constant dizzy spells. My eyes were so weak I couldn't see to sew. My heart was so bad I couldn't sleep on my left side. Even my eyes are in good shape so that I can now thread a needle without my glasses. Naturally I think the world of Kozak.
